Online training to learn creativity

One-day online training to learn creativity techniques, generate ideas and design workshops

Planning and conducting innovation workshops is the basis for new ideas that are later developed into products, processes or business models. If you are looking for a solution to a specific problem or a new product, you are well advised to use the appropriate creativity methods. In workshops, the participants focus on content, collect as many ideas as possible and want to filter out the best ideas. Moderating these workshops and meetings is part of the daily routine of many managers in projects and lines.

In this online training, participants actively devote themselves to learning creativity techniques and learn not only how to generate ideas, but also how to evaluate them correctly and select them for further processing. They also receive valuable tips on how to moderate and design creativity workshops. Your benefit: Also learn how to best apply and technically implement these methods and techniques in online workshops.

YOUR TRAINER:

Julian Eberling, Innovation Manager

Born in Vienna. Graduated from the commercial academy Vöcklabruck in Upper Austria. For a non-profit project in Kenya he was active as project manager and lecturer. At Management Center Innsbruck and Stellenbosch University in South Africa he studied Management, Communication & IT and gained first practical experience with process and business model innovation. After his studies he was responsible for New Business Development at an Austrian IT system house. Since 2018 "Certified Service Design Thinker" he has been pursuing his passion as an Innovation Manager at LEAD Innovation.
